

The Commission on the Future of Volunteering is listening

The Commission on the Future of Volunteering is an independent body established to develop a long-term vision for the future of volunteering in England.

What do you think is happening to volunteering now?
What do you think should be happening to volunteering in ten years' time?

If you are a volunteer or have volunteered in the past ...
If you have ever thought about volunteering but decided not to ...
If you participate in activities or use services provided with the involvement of volunteers ...
If you work with volunteers ...
If you work for an organisation that provides support to volunteers or volunteer-involving organisations ...
If you manage volunteers ...
If you carry out research on volunteering ...
If you make policies that affect volunteering ...
If you have something to say about volunteering ...

... then we want to hear from you!

Visit our website at www.volcomm.org.uk to find out more about The Commission on the Future of Volunteering, how to attend our consultation events and how to submit your evidence via the website. Or for further information email us at evidence@volcomm.org.uk

The consultation ends 1st June 2007.
